Famous "Sunset Cliffs" On The Market Today

OPENING OF UNEXCELLED HOME SITES

Long pending negotiations for the purchase of the Spalding estate on Sunset Cliffs by Pantages, Mills, Shreve & Co. were closed last week and the famous tract will be officially opened for sale this Saturday afternoon, March 6, at 2 o'clock, by the John P. Mills Organization, Inc. It is generally conceded that Sunset Cliffs forms one of the finest ocean frontage homesites on the Pacific coast, and the opening today of the tract for residential purposes will mark an epoch in the realty world of Southern California.

In conformity with previously announced plans by Jesse H. Shreve, president of the company, it is stated that the subdivision of Sunset Cliffs is in keeping with public interest, the subdivision plat having been prepared with reservation of a park along the waterfront, between the spray and a boulevard extending along the ocean.

It is stated by John P. Mills, head of the Mills sales organization, that, owing to the fact that Sunset Cliffs is so much like the French Riviera, the company will improve and restrict it in simulation. For instance, all roofs of new residences must be of red tile and walls of a light color. Cost restrictions for houses will be $25,000 on the ocean boulevard frontage, $15,000 on corners and of a graduated scale down to $10,000 for the lowest cost. Improvements will include concrete paving of the streets, curbs and sidewalks, electroliers on the streets, and installation of gas, electricity and water services.

Parkways in the streets will have placed upon them suitable shrubbery and Mr. Mills asserts that nothing will be left undone to make Sunset Cliffs the most highly improved subdivision in the city of San Diego. The property is priced and sold on terms running over a period of four years, when so desired, and in such a manner as to be within the reach and means of any person seeking a future home in the finest of residential districts.

MASONIC OFFICERS TO RECEIVE INSTRUCTIONS FROM GRAND LECTURER

T. J. Baker, grand lecturer for the California Grand Lodge of Masons, will visit San Diego next Monday and Tuesday on his official visit to conduct schools of instruction for Masons in the 100th and 101st Masonic districts, of which J. L. Squire and J. B. McLees are the respective inspectors. Grand Lecturer Baker will be at Masonic Temple, San Diego, at 2:30 and 7:30 next Monday, to meet officers of Coronado, Peninsula and La Jolla lodges, and the lodges that meet in the temple.

NEW REALTY OFFICE

A. G. Kingsbury, the O. B. representative for the John P. Mills organization, has secured a permit for the construction of a new realty office on DeFoe street at Del Monte avenue.

PERMIT FOR FINE RESIDENCE

Florentine Howard has obtained a permit for the construction of a handsome house costing $13,000 at 935 Harbor View, Point Loma.

SCOUT TRAINING CAMP

Provisions has been made for a Boy Scout masters' and patrol leaders' training camp to be held at Fort Rosecrans, March 26 and 27.

In March, April and May every troop in the council will be inspected by Deputy Commissioners San Hostetter and Chester Van Dusen.

This Is For You, "Dads"!

SPECIAL ATTENTION!

FOR FATHERS ONLY

"You fathers who have children in the Ocean Beach school, we know, are interested in your child's welfare as well as mother.

"In order to give each father a chance to meet his child's teacher and other parents, we have arranged an evening meeting to be held at the school Friday evening, March 12, at 7:30 o'clock, in the kindergarten room.

"We are planning a real evening for fathers. Mr. Franklin A. Plank of Ocean Beach will speak. Aso Professor A. H. Riddell of San Diego, who will take as his subject, 'The Job of Being a Dad.'

"We know you are all doing a fine job as it is, but this talk is worth while and we would like to have you hear it.

"We would also like to have every father and mother connected with the school to be present at this meeting. A good program has been prepared that everyone will enjoy.

"As an extra inducement we are going to have a little banquet afterward, and some more fun."

"Our party will take the form of a St. Patrick's social, so fathers especially please attend this meeting as our guests and help us enjoy green cake and a hot cup of coffee.

"We won't tell you what else, as we want you to come and find out. We'll look for you.

"Sincerely,

"O. B. P.-T. A."

COUNCIL ORDERS VACCINATION OF DOGS TO PREVENT RABIES

At the request of the health officer, an ordinance designed to prevent an epidemic of rabies was adopted by the city counil early this week. The ordinance calls for the vaccination of dogs and is of the emergency order, taking effect immediately. The health officer states that the health board will vaccinate dogs for about $1 each. All dogs found on the streets after a certain time without tags showing that they have been vaccinated will be taken to the pound. Dog owners are requested to keep their dogs confined to premises until after vaccination.

M. B. ROLLER RINK POLO TEAM AGAIN BEATS CITY RINK TEAM

Last Tuesday night the Mission Beach Roller Rink polo team played a game of broom ball with Carlson & Simpson's City Rink team on the latter's own floor, and the M. B. team won by a score of 2 to 0. This is the second time that the City Rink aggregation has been goose-egged by the champion Mission Beach bunch. Another game will be played at the M. B. Rink next Tuesday night.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING CLUB

The Mission Beach Women's Swimming club is increasing in enthusiasm as well as numbers, the enrollment being over one hundred. Many of the members have learned to swim proficiently with only a few lessons. With a further increase of membership it is probable that the club will have two meeting days each week. Mrs. Carbody gives health talks each week. About 125 were present last Wednesday.

ALLIGATOR ROCK LODGE AT OCEAN BEACH

Words fail to describe the marine picture with mountain view in the background.

"Before the glory and splendor of it all,
Mute is the singing bird and dead the master's brush!"

The "Lodge" can be reached in twenty-two minutes by auto or Ocean Beach street car. The drive from San Diego around the bay, through Loma Portal and Point Loma, is delightful. Alligator Rock Lodge is an unique home, perched over cliffs and caves, where the transient guests who linger for tea, luncheon or dinner are enthralled with a myriad of charms at high noon, sunset or later where the "lords of the water" guard the night mysteries of the mighty deep.

Fair Luna and the stars cast bewitching spells over the sea, which responds with pathways of silver and countless blazing gems of ever-changing color. A storm off the "Lodge" is a thing of grandeur never to be forgotten. With thundering voice the white billows lash the cliffs and rush through the waves. White cascades pour over the jagged rocks and the surf is beaten like the white of an egg. After the wrath of the storm has passed, the long white beach is decorated with green lacy kelp and millions of sea shells of every shape and color. Lobster, abalone and fish common to the Pacific coast are caught off the rocks and near the "Lodge." The song of the meadow lark and mocking bird greet the guest by day, and the restful voice of the sea by night.

In the court of the "Lodge" is a Japanese garden with fish-ponds, fountains, trees, shrubs and flowers. Furnished apartments and a large rustic cottage, all with modern conveniences, are leased by the month or year. A charming tea house is another attraction in the court. Luncheon, tea, or dinner are served in the "Lodge House," where the guests are in the midst of cozy surroundings and a collection of rare antiques, paintings and Oriental rugs. The atmosphere is homey, quiet and refined. The names of world-tourists, authors, artists and distinguished persons are found in the "Log Book."

Seagulls, water-birds, whales and seals are your friends at Alligator Rock Lodge; and ocean steamers, warships, fishing boats and flying machines are your neighbors.

Concerted Action For Seawall Construction

By Mrs. Harry K. Turner

MASS MEETING VOICES UNANIMOUS SENTIMENT FOR MISSION BEACH SEAWALL

Over three hundred people were present at the mass meeting called by the people of Mission Beach last Wednesday, March 3, and held in the Harris building, next to the post-office.

The meeting was called to order by the chairman, Judge Claude C. Chambers, and the first question asked was, "Do we want a seawall." There was a general outburst of "Yes" from the audience. Next, the question was asked if anyone was against the seawall. Complete silence indicated a unanimous desire for a seawall. Suggestions were asked for, and Capt. McNulty came forward, saying that he was interested in a permanent structure of concrete, as we are just on the verge of the greatest expansion San Diego has ever known. He said that we should take plenty of time to estimate the costs and type of a concrete wall before rushing into the installation of a wooden wall.

The chairman then asked if anyone present had a plan of any type of seawall. Harry K. Turner came forward with a blue-print of a mole type for which the city engineer had made an estimate. This, Mr. Turner said, was built of timbers so braced and pressure creosoted it would last from twenty to thirty years, and he explained the entire construction very clearly. He spoke of the Coronado wall, not as substantial as this, which has been there twenty-one years. The 18-foot piling in the proposed wall is driven down into the strata of boulders, holding it like a vise. A concrete wall would cost $310,000 to $325,000; a mole type, such as explained in part, would cost about $165,000. Assessment on the smallest size lot would be about $50 and could be bonded on the ten-year district plan. No concrete wall would be satisfactory unless driven down to rock as at the Amusement Center. The wooden type can be built within ninety days. Mr. Turner said the ocean front should stand a greater per cent and the rest of the cost to be graduated over the entire area.

As to the question of a seawall south of the Amusement Center, Mr. Turner said, "Of course we must protect the south end; that is part of Mission Beach just as much as the north end." Judge Chambers remarked, "If any of Mission Beach is washed out, I want to be washed out, too; I don't want to see any of my neighbors go out."

A motion was carried that a committee be chosen to go into the matter of seawalls as to types and costs and to ascertain what costs the city of San Diego would stand.

Judge Chambers appointed Capt. McNulty chairman of the committee, and the following committeemen were chosen by the people: Judge Chambers, Clyde Adair, Fred Jennings, Mr. Engelbretzen, Fred Hamilton, Charles Liftchild and Harry Turner.

A motion was carried that these committeemen report in two weeks' time, so the meeting was adjourned to meet as a mass meeting on Wednesday, March 17, two weeks from this meeting.

A PEEK BEHIND THE SCENES

The Mission Beach Chamber of Commerce, through Harry Turner, extended an invitation to the public to inspect the Fun Zone at the Amusement Center on last Sunday afternoon. This is the first time in local history that the publis has been permitted to see the mechanical construction and operation of a modern fun zone. Guides were on hand Sunday to explain to visitors the amusement devices, which include the Fun House with its $20,000 "social mixer," also 160-foot Alpine slide, huge barrel, Chinese laundry, ocean wave, swings and slides, and the merry-go-round operated by the children themselves. Then there is the shooting gallery, huge merry-go-round, "mad whirl," "third degree," a miniature Grand Canyon with suspension bridge, a cave of winds, an electrically operated scooter and other devices. A crew of 130 men are completing this new half million dollar Fun Zone, which occupies a city block and will be ready for business by the middle of April. About 2000 people visited the Fun Zone last Saturday.

MISSION BOULEVARD TO BE DRAINED

HERBERT T. WEBSTER TAKEN TO LOS ANGELES FOR AN OPERATION

Last Tuesday the well known former policeman, Herbert T. Webster, who was shot in the head while on duty in a section of Point Loma during May, 1924, was taken to a hospital in Los Angeles for an intricate operation.

Physicians state that the bullet imbedded in his brain has caused a lapse of memory and that an operation will be necessary to restore him to normalcy. Since being retired from the force, Mr. Webster has been living at Ocean Beach and recently removed to Pacific Beach. The identity of his assailant still remains a mystery, which will probably be solved if the dangerous operation proves successful.

ORTHO-SONIC CONCERTS FORM FINE MUSIC TREAT BY STRAND RADIO CO.

Attention of radio fans and the public in general is called to the announcement by Bowker & Deuel of a special series of daily ortho-sonic concerts on the Federal Radio at the Strand Radio Co. headquarters in the Strand building on Newport avenue. The concerts can be heard from 2 to 4:30 p. m., and 7:30 to 9:30 p. m.

It is emphatically stated by Bowker & Deuel, special authorized agents for the Federal Radio, that music lovers have acclaimed the ortho-sonic principle to be far in advance of other contemorary radio theories, as the tones produced by the ortho-sonic method are rivalled only by reality. In fact, it's enthusiastically claimed that the ortho-sonic concerts surpass in beauty of tone and enjoyment all rival productions, and to hear 'em is to be charmingly convinced.

Millions For Point Loma Development

SYNDICATE FORMED FOR WONDERFUL DEVELOPMENT OF IMMENSE ACREAGE

A syndicate composed of prominent San Diego citizens and capitalists from other cities announced this week plans for the immediate improvement, beautification and marketing of 850 acres on Point Loma. The immense project, it is stated, will involve the expenditure of four million dollars, and will include the early construction of one of the finest country clubs in the United States, the landscaping and improving of large tracts of high land overlooking bay and ocean, the reclamation of many acres of lower lands, and the eventual erection of a high-class hotel on Point Loma.

The members of the Point Loma syndicate, with the exception of two or three, are all residents of this city. They are: H. E. Anthony, manager Bank of Italy, San Diego; C. H. Bencini, president San Diego Oil Products corporation; A. S. Bridges, capitalist; O. L. Churchill, capitalist and owner Churchill hotel; H. H. Clark, manager Colorado River Lang company; G. A. Davidson, president Southern Trust & Commerce bank; E. C. Davies, president Davies Overland company; Ed Fletcher, president Cuyamaca Water company; H. M. Folsom, manager Brunswig Drug company; S. I. Fox, president Lion Clothing company; R. L. Freery, general sales manager Southland corporation; A. H. Frost, capitalist; Frank Frye, Frye & Smith; M. Hallward, managing director Southlands corporation; M. F. Heller, president Hellers, Inc.; Ralph E. Jenney, attorney; E. J. Louis, Los Angeles; George L. Mayne, manager Churchill hotel; Milton A. McRae, capitalist; W. H. Porterfield, San Diego; Charles Smith, Frye & Smith; R. D. Spicer, vice-president Stephens & Co.; W. B. Tyrrell, sales manager Bradley Kitting company of Wisconsin; J. C. Thompson, Southern Trust & Commerce bank; W. H. Tyrrell, treasurer Bradley Knitting company of Wisconsin; William R. Wheeler, capitalist; L. A. Wright, Wright & McKee.

The syndicate was formed some time ago for the purpose of buying and consolidating previously subdivided tracts and other lands on the Point with the ultimate object of the vast improvements as now announced.

OBLIVION WORKS DAY AND NIGHT

Advertising is the greatest force used to fight the ignominy of oblivion. Oblivion is at work, whether you like it or not, day and night.

Like the leaves of autumn or the snows of winter, it soon piles a mound of forgetfulness over the name of the non-advertiser.

What are you doing to fight oblivion? The wise business man uses the keen-edged tool of advertising.

Advertising in "The Beach News" is the surest way to keep your name before the people of the beach and bay communities. It is an active, aggressive power that gets real returns.

ANCIENT CLOCK IS LEMOORE HEIRLOOM

An incient clock, with works made of wood, and which gave continuous service for eighty-eight years, has become the property of Mrs. W. P. Byron of Lemoore, Kings county. It is in almost perfect condition after an existence of 114 years. The clock was made by Chauncey Boardman and Joseph Wells in Bristol, Conn., and was purchased in 1812 by Harvey Harris of Hooperstown, New York, great, great grandfather of Mrs. Byron. The clock has been in the family since that date and was in constant use until 1900. The works, with the exception of the escape wheel and the bell and hammer, are of carved wood. On the back of the dial panel are notations of its having been cleaned in 1851, 1869 and 1871.

"Grape juice from a 50-year-old vineyard" is the enticing announcement that greets the traveler on the San Diego-Imperial valley highway as he passes through the quaint little mountain town of Alpine, thirty miles east of San Diego. And it is an appeal that has enabled H. L. Flegal, Alpine vineyardist and proprietor of the Monte Vino winery, to do a "land office" business in the unfermented juice of the grape ever since prohibition forced him to discontinue a successful business in winemaking at the scene of the same venerable planting.

Growth of world commerce of the Pacific coast was depicted to the Foreign Trade club by Captain Robert Dollar and Professor N. J. Silbering of the economics department of the University of California. In an address in San Francisco at the weekly luncheon in the Commercial club, Captain Dollar traced the growth of the Pacific coast during the forty years he has been here, and predicted that if the same pace is maintained for the next two score years the population and business of the region will be almost inconceivable.

Farmers throughout California have received with genuine pleasure the decision of the California railroad commission to the effect that it has no jurisdiction over "on call" trucking lines, according to President Earle B. Houghton of the California Farm Bureau federation. "It will mean the saving of millions of dollars annually to the farmers of this state," said this Tulare county man, who has just taken over the duties of state leader of the organization.

Just at the time when most home folks believed the oil prospects for Tulare county had been given up by operators, J. A. McDonald of Los Angeles, who has been operating quietly for a large syndicate, filed leases covering 2,000 acres in one block in the Tipton district, a new prospective field, and promises to begin operations within a very few weeks. He has kept the operations quiet pending the securing of leases covering up to 2,000 acres in one block.

Exeter, Tulare county, with a population estimated at nearly 3,000 persons, has had a gradual, steady growth and development, with no enthusiastic booms and corresponding periods of inactivity and today it is considered one of the most substantial communities of the county. Commercial buildings and houses have been erected as they were needed, with the result that the visitor is greeted by almost no "To Let" signs and everywhere is evidence of thrift and plenty.

A recent census of Fresno showed that the city has gained 27,052 in population during the five years elapsed since the federal census of 1920. The San Joaquin valley, of which Fresno, is the cotton growing center, is advertising for a thousand families to settle there to relieve a probable labor shortage for the 1926 fruit and cotton crops.

The spirit of co-operation that exists between northern and southern California was more strongly cemented recently before the San Francisco board of supervisors when trophies won by San Francisco's float in the Tourament of Roses parade at Pasadena were presented to Mayor Rolph.

With a membership of more than four hundred, the Napa County Flower and Garden club, at Napa, is planning to carry out what nature overlooked, beautify the banks of the long, winding Napa river, the one waterway entrance to this city from the lower bay regions and once the main artery of freight and passenger traffic to and from the city.

J. R. McAllister, Bakersfield, superintendent of the Standard oil refinery in the Kern river fields, has retired from his position after twenty-two years for the company in California. McAllister came to Bakersfield from Coalinga in 1912. The years of faithful service have qualified him, under company regulations, for the rest he expects to enjoy.

Announcement by the Lindsay-Strathmore irrigation district, at Visalia, Tulare county, defendants in the 10-year litigation involving waters of the Kaweah river, of purchase by it of an additional ten and one-half miles of the Merryman ditch, taking out above all the ditches of the plaintiff, Tulare irrigation district, has precipitated new interest in the contest.

A mosquito bite on the tongue, even though the worker happens to be asleep at the time, is an industrial accident and the injured man is entitled to compensation. The state supreme court so held recently. William Miller, a cowboy of Newman, Calif., was bitten. The industrial accident commission awarded him $1,957 for hospitalization, $227 for pay reimbursement and $12.50 a week for disability.

At least 25,000,000 squirrels were killed during 1925 in California's greatest rodent control campaign, which resulted in a direct saving to property owners of approximately $5,000,000, it was estimated by the state department of agriculture. The department said that 46,000,000 poison baits were set during the year on an area of 3,894,728 acres, at a cost of $1,176,972.

With a proposal that the two privately owned hospitals conducted in the community be abandoned and that the present owners and all Napa physicians and surgeons combine to establish one big modern institution at Napa, Napa county, members of the New Century club, pioneer among the several civic organizations, have launched a campaign which they hope will culminate in the speedy completion of such a project.

Mrs. Cordelia Bates, Arbuckle, one of the oldest living pioneer residents of Colusa county, died here at the age of 89. She remained active almost up until the very day of her death. About four years ago she surprised the younger women by taking all the prizes in sewing competition at the county fair.

State veterinarians inspected 5,723,176 animals for various livestock diseases during 1925, according to a report by the chief of the division of animal industry, department of agriculture. Stockyard inspections alone covered 3,078,203 animals.

SUICIDE WRITES HIS SENSATIONS AS DEATH NEARS

Drinks Poisoned Wine, Turns on Gas and Tries to Shoot Self.

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Still clutching the pencil with which he had scrawled the tragic diary of a suicide's last minutes on the wall, on bits of paper and on the oil-cloth covering of the stationary tubs, Frank M. Zulauf, fifty, retired business man, was found dead in the gas-filled kitchen of his home.

From the scribbled writings and other evidence in the little room, police reconstructed the story of how Zulauf, despondent over the death of his wife last March, drank presumably poisoned wine, opened all burners in the gas stove, tried to shoot himself with a pistol that misfired and then reeled about in the deadly atmosphere, scratching down the thoughts that came to him in the shadowland between life and death.

"The Gun Don't Work."

"Belle, Belle, Belle," he wrote a dozen times on the white plaster of the wall. Then, less and less legibly, "The gun don't work," "Still standing up." "The gas is getting me," and, finally, "I sleep."

On the oilcloth was scratched a more detailed record.

"The gas is on. Now for the bullet. She's waiting for me. Good-by. I hope that old gun shoots straight. It's a bum gun; it looks like Satan.

"The Gas Is On."

Good-by. It don't work. But the gas and the wine and the woe of my heart. It's worse than hell.

"It's all for her. Good-by. For her. Will you pray for us? For me and for her? I adored her all my life like a goddess, but the woe in my heart kills. There was none like her. It's all getting me. Good-by."

Zulauf was found with his head on a pillow on the floor, a half-empty gallon jug of wine and a pistol, with a cartridge jammed in its chamber, beside him.

George Ris, a neighbor, discovered the body.

Scribbles on Walls.

Patrolmen August Bassler and Rudolph Herman of the Flatbush station, who answered his alarm, tried in vain to revive Zulauf, after ridding the kitchen of its poisonous fumes. They found, besides the scribbling on the wall and tubs, letters addressed by the dead man to his pastor, Rev. Paul F. Jublet of the Zion Lutheran church in Flatbush; "my executor", Max Bethge, Ridgefield road, Port Washington, L. I.; Mrs. Jennie Ray, Embassy hotel, Manhattan, and one, apparently to the public, which began "Dear Friends."

This read in part: "Please don't mind this. Unpleasant as it may seem, it had to be. It should have been long ago. I will meet her now."

The letter to the minister read:

"It is easy. The wine, the gas and then the bullet. It must be past twelve. Good-by, old scout, I'm in a hurry. I go into the other room; will I find her there? God bless you and Merry Christmas over there, pastor. Good-by."

The other letters gave instructions for notifying friends and directed which undertaker was to be called.

Fire Company Summoned to Extinguish Sunset

Tulsa, Okla.—This story proves the brilliance of Oklahoma sunsets. An apartment-house resident at Tulsa rushed out of the building and sounded a fire alarm. Women scurried from a beauty parlor on the ground floor as the fire companies arrived.

Firemen thronged into the building. On the top floor a bright glare was visible through a crack. Hooks and axes ripped the boards away. Then the firemen found that the light was the setting sun flickering through latticework of a gable.

Man's Suicide to Scare Wife Proves Fatal to Self

Chicago.—His wife had fish for supper, but he desired an oyster stew. So John Fudala, thirty-three, loaded his gun with blank shells and, to scare his wife, pressed the gun to his head and pulled the trigger. He fell dead. The force of the powder, fired at close range, drove the paper pellet of one shell into the man's brain.

Diagram Showing How to Construct Simple Crystal Set That Gives Results.

The receiver about to be described can be constructed with very little expense.

The panel is a piece of half-inch wood, hard rubber or bakelite. The subbase is made of wood. The panel can be any size. We suggest seven inches by nine inches as a convenient one. The subbase is attached to the panel by means of No. 6 wood screws one inch long.

The coil is wound on a cardboard tube four inches in diameter and four inches long. Get one-quarter pound of 22 d. c. c. magnet wire.

The Winding.

Start the winding and wind on one turn. Make a loop in the wire—a loop about one inch long—then wind on another turn and make another loop the same length. Continue winding on single turns and taking out loops until ten turns have been wound. After this wind on ten turns, make a loop, wind on ten turns more, make another loop, and repeat the process.

Continue until a total of 60 turns have been wound on the tube. Solder leads to the switch points long enough to reach from the left-hand switch to the "units" taps. Also solder leads to switch points of the right-hand switch to reach the "tens" taps. In rotation solder these leads to the ends of the loops, after scraping the insulation from the end of the loop.

Ready to Tune In.

Connect the aerial to the post on the left and the ground to the post on the right at the top of the panel. Set the fine wire of the detector on the crystal and turn the "tens" switch until a station is heard.

To tune in better after the station is heard turn the "units" switch. This switch gives the necessary fine tuning. The most difficult operation in using this set is to find a sensitive point on the crystal. After this point is found, it is merely necessary to vary the two switches to tune in different stations. —Cleveland News.

Have Efficient Ground and Get Satisfaction

The importance of an efficient ground connection can hardly be overestimated. If there is a resistance to the passage of the high frequency oscillations in any part of the aerial or ground circuit, you find your receiver lacks pep, oscillates badly and tunes broadly. Pep or volume, stability and selectivity are three things every fan likes to have in his set, but a large number do not realize what a strong influence a good ground connection has in obtaining results.

It is worth while doing some experimenting with ground connections and you will probably find out some very interesting facts. One of the simplest and best methods to use in testing the efficiency of various ground connections is to tune in a station as far distant as possible, then reduce the volume until you can just hear the signal faintly. Make a note of the dial setting on the rheostat controlling the volume. Now disconnect the ground and try one of the others you have arranged and compare the volume. If you cannot hear any signal, wait a minute and make sure the station has not been fading. If after a short period you still do not hear a signal, then you know that this ground is not as efficient as the first one.

In addition to comparing the volume obtained with each possible ground, make a test for selectivity. It is surprising what a difference a good ground can make to the selectivity.

Try out each of the ground connections it is possible to arrange until you find one that gives better results than the others.

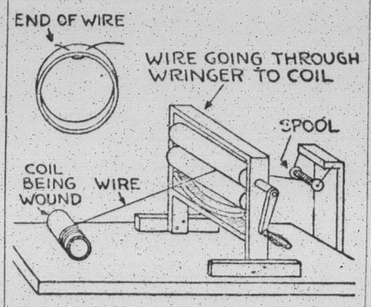
The most common type of ground used is a connection to a cold water pipe. This is generally O. K. if the pipe is thoroughly cleaned and a copper ground clamp used to make contact. It is generally impossible for the average man to solder a wire to a cold-water pipe, as the water must be turned off and a blow lamp used instead of a soldering iron. It is a good idea to remove the clamp every three or four months and examine the surface around the clamp to see that there is no corrosion.

If you are located where you can reach the ground within a reasonable distance from your receiver, it is possible at very small expense to install a real ground that will give maximum efficiency. Secure a length of copper pipe about one inch in diameter by four feet long and drill a number of holes in it. Fit a wooden plug into one end. For a ground wire use a length of solid insulated copper wire about 12 gauge. Clean the top of the pipe and about a foot of the ground wire, then wrap it around the top of the pipe and solder.

Dig a hole about five feet deep and one foot wide. Secure a bag of charcoal, six or seven pounds of salt and a few pounds of copper sulphate. Smash up the charcoal as small as possible, then mix charcoal, salt and copper sulphate together. Fill in the earth, packing the above mixture tightly around the pipe as you fill up the hole. This is very important. When you have filled up the hole take a hose and let water into pipe to thoroughly moisten the ground. This will give you a ground that is 100 per cent efficient.—Philadelphia Record.

Wringer May Be Used in Winding Tight Coil

The method shown in the drawing does not need much explanation. In one sketch is shown how to fasten the ends of the coils by putting two small holes in the tubing. Securing the wire this way prevents it from slipping.



How Clothes Wringer Is Used to Keep Wire Taut.

The other sketch shows use of a clothes wringer to keep the wire taut. When winding coils by hand it is usually difficult to keep the wire at just the best tension from the spool.—Radio Digest.

Ohm and Megohm

The meaning of the terms ohm and megohm often is misinterpreted by the radio fan. However, they both are electrical units of resistance. The ohm is the fundamental unit and is the amount of opposition to the flow of an electric current which will cause the current to drop one volt when forced through at one ampere. As the term implies, a megohm is 1,000,000 ohms.

Indoor Aerials

An indoor antenna, even if only a single wire strung around the picture molding, will pick up many times more energy than will a loop unless the latter is extremely large.

Oxygened Furs

The furriers have a new trick. They cannot yet bring a dead squirrel to life, but they have put life into a dead fur by oxygenizing it. The favorite trimming on the new ribbed velvet coats from Paris is in oxygenized gray squirrel, blue otter and tiger. Oxygenized opossum takes an especially fiery sheen.

Resemble Sunshade

The hats English women are wearing at afternoon functions and garden parties at present are almost as large as their sunshades and are much the same shape. The hats, however, are the more elaborately trimmed, the decorations ranging from fruit and flowers to ostrich pompoms and paradise plumes.

Lamp Shades Bound in Velvet

Striking lamp shades are made of georgette in shades of yellow or amber laid in fine plaits and bound at the top and bottom with wide bands of black velvet overlaid with gold galoon.

Tanlac builds strong bodies

CREDITORS CAN'T COLLECT FROM AWARDS MADE BY ACCIDENT COMMISSION

In the case of County of Los Angeles against the Industrial Accident Commission, the Second District Court of Appeal, in an opinion written by Judge Frederick W. Houser, has just ruled that the Industrial Accident Commission has no authority to order paid to a general creditor or creditors of such injured person any part of an award made to an injured employee or to his dependents.

The case arose through an injury which occurred to an employee of the County of Los Angeles which resulted in his death. In adjusting the compensation to be paid to the widow of the employee, the Industrial Accident Commission ordered that certain general creditors of the employee be first paid out of the award and that the balance thereof be paid to the widow. The County of Los Angeles objected to such order on the ground that the commission having no authority to make such order, a compliance therewith would not amount to a satisfaction of the award and would not relieve the county from liability.

Judge Houser's opinion holds that in certain circumstances the statute provides for the creation of possible liens against an award on account of living expenses, attorney's fees, medical treatment, and, in case of death, of burial expenses; but that no authority is vested in the commission out of the award to order the payment of any debts other than those for which the statute has made special provision.

BRIGHT WAY IS GROWING BRIGHTER

It is estimated that fifteen new electric signs are added daily to illuminate the streets of New York by night. Many of these new signs are installed in the theatrical district, which already flashes 25,000,000 candle power to the eye of the observer, said to be the greatest aggregate of light to be found anywhere in the world.

HUNTING FOR A PITCHER IN BASEBALL SERIES

With the annual baseball series with California and Stanford drawing near, Coach "Wahoo" Sam Crawford is attempting to find a successor to Fay Thomas, Southern California pitching sensation, who was ruled out on a charge of professionalism.

Thomas is probably the greatest college pitcher developed on the coast in recent years. Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants signed him to a contract when he was put out of college baseball, and he is now down in Florida preparing for the major league season.

"BUD" HOUSER HONORED AS DISCUS THROWER

For the second consecutive time Clarence "Bud" Housesr, Southern California weight star, has been honored on the annual All-American collegiate track and field team.

Houser has been recognized as the greatest collegiate discus thrower in the country by Frederick W. Rubien, secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., who annually makes the selections for Spalding's Athletic Almanac.

Houser was selected for the discus throw by Rubiens in 1924. The ability of the Southern California weight man in the shot-put was also recognized by his selection for this event on the All-American open team. This is the third time that Houser has made the open selection. He was honored in 1921 and 1924 by Rubiens.

PASSING PEDESTRIAN PREVENTS SERIOUS BLAZE

An unidentified pedestrian saved a house at 5065 West Point Loma boulevard from total destruction last Monday after a defective oil stove set fire to the building. The house is occupied by Ida Wood, who was in the rear of the structure when the fire broke out, and she did not discover the blaze until after it was nearly extinguished by the passing stranger. The members of Engine Company No. 15 arrived and put the finishing touches to the fire.

BUY YOUR OWN HOME RIGHT NOW

The homes of the world are what the work of the world is done for. To build them and keep them is the first concern of a stable civilization. So essential to happiness are homes that many European countries have made their construction a public utility. There is no such need of paternalism here, where a liberty-loving people will provide its own homes without government subsidy.

A new spirit is born of ownership. There is dignity in a permanent settlement. It was the hand on the plow that made America great. What was owned was worth fighting for. In an industrial age, with population massed in cities, that proprietorship which steadied the farmer must be transferred to ownership of homes.

Home ownership means better citizenship. The family that the landlord is apt to discriminate against is encouraged in the home. In good home districts there is a dearth of juvenile delinquency. Anything that enhances the dignity of man enhances his character.

The proper time to begin to think about buying your home is right now.

Singing Tubes

Heat applied to glass cylinders, or tubes, when properly constructed, produce tones. The sound is caused by the inrush of cold air into the heated area. The sound produced by these singing tubes are true tones free from harmonics or overtones. Glassblowers first discovered this phenomenon in 1865.

NAVY ENSIGN INJURED IN FALL FROM CLIFFS

In endeavoring to make a short-cut to reach the boat landing at La Playa last Tuesday midnight, Ensign Earl E. Baker of the United States coast guard cutter Bear received injuries which will keep him confined at the Balboa park hospital for several weeks. The navy officer was returning to his ship, which was anchored off Point Loma, when he sighted lights of a motor boat heading for the La Playa fuel depot.

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAM AT O. B. WOMEN'S CLUB NEXT MONDAY NIGHT

An unusually interesting program, international in character, will be given by the Ocean Beach Women's club Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the Congregational church building on DeFoe street. All residents of Ocean Beach and vicinity and their friends are cordially invited, and no admission will be charged.

"International Night" is the name chosen for this occasion, and both the program and the decorations will be international in character, giving those who attend a broader understanding of the contributions various countries have to make to our American life.

Miss Josephine Seaman, president of the County Federation of Woman's Clubs, will be the guest of honor and the speaker of the evening. She will talk on "International Relations," a subject in which she is particularly interested and well-informed. Mrs. Carroll De Wilton Scott, chairman of music for the County Federation, will sing folk songs of several countries and will lead a group singing of simple folk melodies. This will be Mrs. Scott's first visit to the Ocean Beach Women's club, and her coming is one of the special privileges which membership in the county accords the local club.

A Russian folk dance will be presented by a group who have been attending Elizabeth Burchenal's classes in San Diego. They will wear the beautiful hand embroidered costumes brought for the Francis Parker school from Czecho-Slovakia.

The garden department of the club is arranging a special exhibit of flowers and shrubs from different countries, each with the name of its original home, each showing signs of being happy in its new home in Ocean Beach or San Diego.

As a special guest of the study department of the O. B. Women's Club last Monday night, Mrs. Winifred Davidson gave a very interesting talk on the history of Point Loma and delightfully read several of her own sonnets based on that subject. She was accorded hearty approval by a large and attentive audience. Mrs. Davidson took occasion to give gracious and generous recognition to "The Beach News" for the original publication of her Point Loma essays and sonnets in the "Loma Lore" series. She closed her talk with an ode to "Ocean Beach" which is printed on another page of this issue. Following the splendid literary symposium, Mrs. A. C. ELECTRIC OUTLETS IN HOME

People who believe that their homes are absolutely modern should take notice that in a model electric home thrown open for public inspection at Clinton, Illinois, there are 110 electric outlets provided to accommodate conveniently the lighting fixtures, brackets, portable lamps, and appliances which are so helpful in beautifying the home and reducing labor.

TO BANISH GLARING LIGHTS

That accidents will be reduced, tonnage increased and the use of roads augmented when the glaring headlight problem is solved is the report of the American Institute of Electrical Engineers. It is claimed that uniform systems of overhead lighting along roads and traffic arteries will render the use of glaring headlights a thing of the past.

Mother's Cook Book

O, my life have we not had seasons
That only said, live and rejoice!
That asked not for causes or reasons
But made us all feeling and voice.

APPETIZING GOOD THINGS

WE ARE all looking for variety which will appeal to the appetites of those for whom we cook. The following salad may be enjoyed because it is different:

Kidney Bean Salad.

Take one can of kidney beans, two cupfuls each of diced celery and apple, one cupful of diced dill pickles, two tablespoonfuls of chopped pimentoes; mix and add mayonnaise.

Mayonnaise.

Into a bowl place two eggs; beat, add a teaspoonful of salt, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of mustard, four tablespoonfuls of lemon juice and one cupful of oil. In another dish mix two tablespoonfuls of flour, three of cornstarch, one cupful of water, two tablespoonfuls of oil. Cook until the starch is well cooked, then turn into the first bowl of ingredients while hot, mix and beat with a dover egg beater, adding one more cupful of oil. This dressing will keep indefinitely when kept in a cool place. Thin with cream when using.

Chicken Warmein.

Cook in plenty of broth, one good-sized fat chicken. If small add two sweetbreads or veal to help out in bulk. Cut up the cooked meat as for salad, place in a double boiler to keep hot. Cook three bunches of celery cut into dice, in the chicken broth, with one small onion, diced. Remove the celery to another dish and keep hot. Add noodles to the seasoned stock and cook; drain and place a nest of noodles on a serving plate, over them the celery, over that the chicken. Garnish with very small croutons and serve very hot.

WHEN I WAS TWENTY-ONE

BY JOSEPH KAYE

At Twenty-one: Ernest Thompson Seton Wrote a Story No One Has Yet Taken.

"AT THE age of twenty-one I wrote a wild-animal story which still lies in my desk (for which I am now thankful as I look over it).

"I made other attempts after that, but it was not until six years later that I wrote a story which received respectable payment. This was 'The Drummer on Snowshoes,' which appeared in a magazine. For this story, with five illustrations, they paid me the incredible sum of $50—cash (not promises)—enough to keep me on the prairies for a year.

"I showed this story to Joe Collins, the Canadian writer. He had editorial instinct, and said briefly: 'You can sell as many of this kind as you choose to write and as fast as you choose to write them'; and he proved right, for this was later rewritten and republished as 'Redruff,' in my most successful book of animal stories.—Ernest Thompson Seton."

TODAY.—Mr. Seton is the most famous writer of animal stories in the world and vastly popular. He was brought up on the Canadian prairies and in the woods and obtained his material then, as he does now, first hand. At about the same time that he wrote the story mentioned above he became naturalist to the province of Manitoba, Canada, and published a volume on the mammals of Manitoba. He was only twenty-six then.

The Hotel Stenographer

By Roe Fulkerson

"WHO is she?" asked the House Detective

"A great-granddaughter of Jim Polk or Jack Adams or one of the other early Presidents," answered the Hotel Stenographer.

"You take much stock in family trees?" asked Kelly.

"Nix." The girl snapped her fingers. "Who couldn't find a bird of a big league ancestor if they dug back far enough. We all have two parents and four grandparents, and then sixteen and then thirty-two and then sixty-four and so on, so each generation spreads out fan-wise back into the past. In fifty generations one ancestry includes more people than there are now on earth.

"If in all that gang you cannot find one champion heavyweight you are a poor hunter. And for that one grand wow that you can tell everybody about, there are about one hundred butchers, bakers, candlestick makers, rag pickers and horse thieves.

"That dame there carrying her chin so high you'd think she had a bad egg for a breast pin and all because she had one big-gun ancestor. Wonder how many honest washwomen there were among 'em and how many men who lived off the money they made at the tub?

"Kelly, if I can get by on my own I am satisfied. I am willing to let the good and bad deeds of my ancestors lie silent in their graves. They were all Irish and so they all fought and all loved and I rather suspect some of the men looked on the wine when it was colored and some of the women talked scandalous about their neighbors. I just take it for granted they were nice folks 'cause I'm nice folks myself. That's the safest bet. Anybody who raises 'round in the dead ashes of the past is likely to find a hot coal and get burned."

Among the NOTABLES

BOOTH TARKINGTON

MANY claim that Booth Tarkington is the greatest living American writer. He was born in Indianapolis, July 29, 1869, went to Exeter academy and finally to Princeton university.

Though he may have intended to become an author from the very beginning, he decided to go in for business, at first, and took a position with an oil company. He began in his twenties to write "The Gentleman From Indiana," which was published when he was thirty years old. The same year his university conferred an A. M. degree on him.

He took up authorship seriously from that time on—so great was his first success. Critics said that he had established a new school of fiction. The first book was followed by "Monsieur Beaucaire," also a great success. From then on his reputation has steadily grown.

More recently, in collaboration, he wrote a play, "The Man From Home," which had a record run in New York and, later, played practically all over the country. William Hodge made his reputation as the homely, wise, unspoiled man from Kokomo.

Then he wrote the Penrod stories, beloved by everyone who has any sympathy for boyhood—stories of the merely average boy and his average adventures, so true to life that grown men find their own boyhood in them and gain a greater sympathy with boyhood while they chuckle over them. He has also written equally wonderful stories of the boy and girl in the half-grown stage of seventeen.

PAY-NIGHT

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE is dancing' tonight at the bow'ry,
And the boys and the girls will be there,
And the girls will be dressed in the best of their best,
And the boys will have grease on their hair.
There'll be pink lemonade in the arbor,
There'll be things you can buy at the stand—
Oh, the world's mighty fine on a pay-night,
When you've got a week's work in your hand!

Oh, the world's mighty fine on a pay-night,
And the street will be full of the crowd,
For they'll all be in town, walkin' up, walkin' down,
And they'll all be so gay and so proud.
For the trees by the road are a-blossom,
And the grass mighty sweet with the dew—
Oh, the world's mighty fine on a pay-night,
For then what's a dollar or two?

But what's that I hear at the window,
And who's that who rattled the door?
Why, the wind's swung around, and the folks they have found
That it won't be so fine any more.
Oh, the world's mighty fine on a pay-night,
But it gits mighty cold in the fall,
And when old Mister Wind comes a-howlin'
Then you ask what you done with it all!

WHO SAID

"No sword bites so fiercely as an evil tongue."

THE man who uttered these words of wisdom was Sir Ralph Sidney, one of the conspicuous figures at the court of Queen Elizabeth and one of the queen's favorite courtiers. Sir Phillip had an intimate knowledge of the workings of the life at the court of England's monarch, and his remark, "No sword bites so fiercely as an evil tongue," may well be considered a mature reflection on the meteoric rise and fall of so many favorites of the queen.

Sir Phillip had seen many rise to power, prominence and favor in court circles, only to be dashed to oblivion by the wagging of some evil tongue. And when this man compared the biting of an evil tongue to a sword, he knew whereof he spoke—for Sir Phillip Sidney was a warrior as well as a man of letters, and it was on the battlefield that he gave his life for his nation and his queen.

Sir Phillip was born in Kent, England, in 1554. Upon completing his education, he was introduced at court and Queen Elizabeth at once took a fancy to him. As a mark of her favor, she sent him as ambassador to Germany. Upon his return he married Frances, daughter of Sir Francis Walsingham, and the same year (1583) the queen admitted him to the peerage. In the year 1585 he went to the Netherlands.

In addition to his fame as a courtier and a soldier, Sir Phillip Sidney is known—best, perhaps—as a man of letters. His best known works are "The Arcadia," a medley in prose and verse after the prevalent Italian style of the period: "Astrophel and Stella," the first important body of sonnets in English; and "The Defence of Poesy," published in 1595.—Wayne D. McMurray.

THE DOUBLE WEDDING

By H. A. CRAFTS

(© by Short Story Pub. Co.)

HANS WOLFRAM and Gus Liebenhocker had concluded to move West. They thought that the West would suit them. Hans, however, left his family behind him and went to spy out the land. Hans and Gus were brothers-in-law. Hans had married Gus' sister, Freda Liebenhocker. Gus was also married, but that was to Katrina Dreer, a distant relative of the Wolframs. Hans and Freda had three children and Gus and Katrina two. The families had always lived upon the best of terms, and they had mutually agreed to settle on adjoining lands in the West, and be close neighbors.

Hans spent six months looking round. Then he sent for Freda and the children and the Liebenhockers; and they all traveled West together. The family reunion was a happy one. Hans, however, had not yet selected a location. The two brothers-in-law spent some time in driving out into the country. They had decided not to buy lands, but to take up a quarter section each under the homestead act. There was any amount of land open for settlement, and it was excellent land, too. But the two men were slow to decide upon an exact location, as they wanted to make just the right selection, so long as it was a question of a permanent residence in the West.

They were troubled, too, with another scruple. There was so much land open for entry that they regretted exceedingly that Uncle Sam allowed each settler no more than 160 acres. But they could not be blamed so much, for the very best of them become landgreedy as soon as they get out West.

Hans was very thoughtful, and had such frequent spells of mental abstraction that Freda and Gus were puzzled, not to say worried. They could not imagine what was weighing upon his mind. One day while the two men were out prospecting Hans broke a silence that had lasted for some time.

"Yust vait a bit! Let me t'ink a leedle!" said he.

Gus was even more puzzled than before; for he had never shown any inclination to hurry Hans nor to proscribe his mental exercises. But he did not seek for an explanation of Hans' somewhat mysterious exclamation.

The next day Hans consulted a lawyer and discovered that a woman who was of age and the head of a family could take up government land under the Homestead act. A widow or a divorced woman would come within the purview of the law. He had no idea of making widows out of Freda and Katrina, but still thought that there was a way out.

When Hans unfolded his plan to Freda and the Liebenhockers, the women did not know whether to laugh or cry. Gus, however, was elated. He gave his right thigh a sounding slap.

"Py chimminy!" he cried, "vat a beek het!" and in sheer sportiveness be began to feel of Hans' bumps.

"But der groundts?" he said, looking a little more sober and thoughtful. "How vos dot?"

"Groundts! Groundts!" cried the optimistic Hans, in tones of contempt. "Blenty! Blenty, undt to sbare!"

"Yaw! uv goarse!" returned Gus, with a touch of sarcasm. "But der specificationses! How vos dot? Schpit 'em oudt!"

"Dot vos all righdt!" said Hans. "For Freda, some tesertions; for Katrina some delopements!"

It was true that Hans had gone West and left Freda for six months, and just as true that Gus had gone West in company with Hans' wife. But that was only half of the truth; but a half truth, stoutly maintained, may be more potent than a whole one.

Of course, when Freda and Katrina swore to this state of facts in the divorce court, it was with some mental reservation. But all courts do not trouble themselves about the mental reservations of litigants, and the consequence was that the suits of Wolfram vs. Wolfram and Liebenhocker vs. Liebenhocker went through the legal mill without a hitch. The plaintiffs were granted absolute divorces with custody of their children, $25 per month alimony, and the privilege of reassuming their maiden names.

Just previous to the filing of these suits Hans Wolfram and Gus Liebenhocker quietly withdrew from the scene. Leaving their spouses in town to prosecute their respective libels, they went out into the country about ten miles and located each a homestead. It is not germane to this chronicle to specify the exact township and range in which the land lay. It will be sufficient to state that it lay in Section Thirty. Hans filed on the northeast quarter and Gus on the southeast quarter.

This done, they employed the services of a civil engineer to run out their boundaries, and also to locate to a nicety the very center of Section Thirty. At this central point they jointly erected a frame building, 24 by 28 feet on the ground, having the center of the structure coincide exactly with the center of Section Thirty. Then they sibdivided the building into four rooms of exact size, by erecting transverse partitions. There was no door connecting any two of the four rooms. This gave a room 12 by 14 feet to each of the four quarters of Section Thirty, and covered the law precisely as to the erection of claim dwellings. Hans Wolfram took up his abode in the northeast room and Gus Liebenhocker in the southeast room.

It was not many days after the conclusion of the cases of Wolfram vs. Wolfram and Liebenhocker vs. Liebenhocker that one Mistress Freda Liebenhocker field a homestead on the northwest quarter of Section Thirty, and one Mistress Katrina Dreer one on the southwest quarter, and these two excellent women moved out from town with their children and other belongings and took up their residences upon their respective claims as the law required. Mistress Liebenhocker and her three little ones occupied the northwest room in the quadruple house and Mistress Dreer and her two little ones the southwest room. They lived as good neighbors with each other, and with Hans Wolfram and Gus Liebenhocker. The two latter were thus given a good opportunity to see their children daily. Mistress Liebenhocker employed Hans Wolfram to fence and improve her claim, while Mistress Dreer followed a like course with reference to her late husband, and each employee at the end of each month was given credit for his wages on the alimony due from them to the two women.

In proving up on their respective claims, Hans Wolfram and Gus Liebenhocker deferred making proof until such time as Mistress Liebenhocker and Mistress Dreer were entitled to prove up on theirs, at which time all four became component witnesses for each other in testifying to the "continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land" for a legal period of time.

So all four claimants and the children went to town on proof day and had the business done up in due and legal form. It made it very convenient indeed for all, and saved a large amount in witness fees. Not long afterwards quit-claim deeds by which Freda Liebenhocker conveyed the northwest quarter of Section Thirty to Hans Wolfram, and by which Katrina Dreer conveyed the southwest quarter to Gus Liebenhocker, with all their rights, titles and interests, appeared on record at the country seat.

But the crowning act of this little western by-play did not occur until the double wedding shortly afterwards was held at Section Thirty, when Hans Wolfram and Freda Liebenhocker and Gus Liebenhocker and Katrina Dreer were reunited in the holy bonds of matrimony. Of this happy occasion the neighbors for miles around assembled in response to invitations and a grand feast and jollification was indulged in.

Then a doorway was opened between the northwest and the northeast rooms, and another between the southwest and the southeast, after which the quadruple house was transformed into a double house, the Wolfram family occupying the north half and the Liebenhockers the south half. This arrangement lasted until the two families outgrew their respective apartments, when Gus Liebenhocker presented his share in the building to Hans Wolfram in consideration of Hans' superior wisdom and kindly offices. Hans moved the house over on to the north half of Section Thirty and cut two more doorways, making of it a single tenement. Then Gus built himself a new house on the south half of the section, which is a duplicate of Hans' house, and stands as further testimony to the perspicacity of the worthy head of the Wolfram family, which was instrumental in providing each of the two settlers with a good farm of 320 acres instead of one of only half that size.

Small Girl's Prayer Stirred Up Audience

Jane was a pretty little girl of nine summers, whose serious countenance, together with her intelligence, made her a favorite. Jane sang well and recited nicely, too, for that matter.

A revival was in progress and for many nights the preacher had soundly berated the parents of the community for their failure to do their duty by their children. According to his view of the situation faults and mistakes of young people today are largely due to the fact that parents themselves fail to be models of propriety, and to give their growing children the attention they deserve. These sermons had created much comment and had formed the basis of discussion in many homes.

One night the preacher called on some children to come to the altar and lead in prayer. Probably because he knew Jane's ability in this regard, he called on her first.

"Father, who art in heaven," began Jane, "we pray that you may make us boys and girls better fathers and mothers in the future than those we have today in this community."

Jane's mother says she doesn't know what she will do with the child. Jane takes everything so seriously.—Indianapolis News.

Airsickness

Dr. C. B. Heald, medical adviser to the British air ministry, has been studying the problem of airsickness. It cannot be solved by flying at great altitudes, by use of drugs, or even by "subtle soothing stomach strokings." The trouble is that ventilation of an inclosed airplane cabin is particularly difficult, because with the limited cubic space available for each passenger if the air is changed sufficiently often to keep the carbon-dioxide really low a draft for some one is inevitable. If drafts are excluded the carbon-dioxide content rises rapidly in so confined a space and the air becomes unpleasant. Under such conditions, particularly at meal times, airsickness is always perilously near.—Scientific American.

FASHIONABLE SILKS FOR SPRING; ARTFUL HATS IN SIMPLE LINES

WHO does not treasure the more a book, a bit of pottery, a vase or a picture if it be autographed? With what a feeling of satisfaction do we call attention to the author's or artist's signature. But where, you ask, is the connection between works of accredited art and spring silks? Just this—the best shops, this season, are showing a collection of American silk prints which have the unique distinction of being designed by several of our well known contemporary artists. Does it not seem in the range of possibilities that, ere long, women of fashion will be insisting that the silks they wear be autographed by the artists who designed them? Why not?

For instance, the striking silk of which the charming spring frock here pictured is styled, is designed by no less a personage than Neysa McMein, she of magazine cover fame. This gifted woman together with several of her contemporaries are making a candid effort to create for American women silk prints which are representative of true American atmosphere—a challenge to the traditional French domination in the field of textile art. Modernistic art is written all over this brilliant silk, which the designer declares was inspired by thoughts of Hollywood. Its confusion of vividly colored futuristic motifs so unconventionally grouped makes not only an arresting pattern, but constitutes a decoration which reflects something of the exotic nature of the American colony of film people.

Charming Frock In Striking Silk.

Never was there promise more fair for the domination of gay print throughout the mode than at this very moment. Unusual design is the outstanding feature for silk this spring.

Large floral patterns are prominent. Exquisite chrysanthemums; large bunches of poppies and huge roses contribute their loveliness to silk design.

"Simplicity, thou art a jewel," seems to be the guiding thought among milliners designers this season. Artful along simple lines quite describes the present-day chapeau.

Most of the millinery story is told in color. Color irresistible! To repeat the list of lovely tones and tints which glorify new headgear, is like reciting a beautiful poem. If you doubt it, say the following aloud: Thistle blue, periwinkle, bois de rose, cyclamen, rose beige, pale tomato, shell pink, rose geranium, opal gray, mauve, chartreuse, peach, love-bird green, bleu de nil, absinthe, artichoke, lipstick, rouge and orchid. There! You have in part the range of color beautiful which plays so adorable a part in the early spring chapeau.

Next comes material which is very likely to be taffeta, for according to the Parisian idea, it is immensely important just now. If not taffeta, then one's hat is almost sure to be of belting ribbon in any of the exquisite pastel colorings. The newest of new sensations is the hand-crocheted hat of straw, made soft, supple and colorful, fitting the head as if molded to it. Satin and faille have their sponsors, too, and as to felts of soft colorings, they are in their glory at this very moment.

First color, then material and then, the crowning touch of genius is applied with a deft twist here, a pin thrust in aslant and presto! you have before you hats flatteringly becoming, hats which proclaim smart style, hats, though they bespeak simplicity itself, lack not a certain dressy air.

EXPOSE SAMPLES BEFORE BUYING

Fabrics Should Be Tested for Fastness to Light.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

"Is the color fast?" is one of the questions the housewife usually asks when purchasing washable and other fabrics. As a rule, the salesperson can give but little authoritative information on this point. The only way for the customer to protect herself from the chance of having the material bleach out when washed or fade if exposed to sunlight, is to take a sample of the fabric home and submit it to the conditions under which it is to be used.

No dye yet discovered is fast under all conditions. Some dyes are fast to light, others to perspiration, others to washing and ironing. So far as the usefulness of a fabric goes, it may not be necessary that the dye should hold under all circumstances. Curtain material, for example, must be affected as little as possible by light, but it is unlikely to be touched by perspiration. Dresses for small children need frequent washing, and material for this purpose should be tested with repeated laundering in mind. Prints, ginghams and other cotton fabrics for wash dresses must not only withstand soap and water but exposure to sunlight when being dried and also when being worn. The heat of the iron may affect some dyes more than others. By trying all these treatments on the sample, the chances of purchasing unsatisfactory material are lessened.

Testing Samples to See How Much They Fade.

The illustration shows a good way to test samples for fastness to light. Cover a portion of the sample with cardboard and expose the rest of it to direct sunlight for a week or more, examining it at intervals to see how much it has faded or changed. Very few dyes will be found that do not fade at all, but this test will soon show those that last reasonably well.

Fastness of a dye depends on the chemical composition of the dye used, not on the color. Dyestuffs are grouped into various classes according to their composition, and the dyes in some classes are more fast than those in others. Without knowing just what kind of a dye was used—and it is practically impossible for the consumer to tell this—the fastness of color in two fabrics cannot be predicted. A dye that is one of the poorest of its class may have been used on one of the fabrics, while the other may have been dyed with one of the best. Contrary to the common belief, green, lavender, or any one color is just as fast as another if similar dyes are used.

The household methods of soaking fabrics in salt, alum, pepper, vinegar and various other solutions as a means of "setting" the color are largely a waste of time and materials. Though the color will not run from a dyed fabric as long as it remains in a saturated solution of salt or alum, this has no permanent effect on the dye. A fabric after treatment in this way is just as likely to fade when washed later in the ordinary way. No successful household methods of setting the color in dyed fabrics are known.

Gingerbread New or Old Is Popular Hot or Cold

There's nothing more acceptable for lunch or tea or supper than good gingerbread. "Some like it hot, and some like it cold"; some like it even after it is three days old, if it was moist and tender to begin with. The recipe below, which is found in Farmers' Bulletin 1450, "Home Building," may be relied on for good results. It will make two thin loaves.

Gingerbread.

1 cupful milk.
3¼ cupfuls sifted soft-wheat flour or
2¾ cupfuls of hard-wheat flour
1-3 cupful fat
1 egg
½ teaspoonful soda
4 teaspoonfuls baking powder
½ cupful sugar
1 cupful molasses
½ teaspoonful salt
1 teaspoonful ginger
½ teaspoonful cloves
½ teaspoonful cinnamon

Mix and sift the dry ingredients and stir into them the liquid ingredients which have been mixed separately. The melted fat is added last. For a shallow loaf the oven should be moderate (about 375 degrees Fahrenheit); if muffin pans are used, it should be fairly hot, or about 400 degrees Fahrenheit.

Sour milk may be used instead of sweet in the same quantity, but in that case the soda should be increased to a scant teaspoonful and the baking powder decreased to two teaspoonfuls.

The bulletin containing this recipe and many others may be obtained while the supply lasts by writing to the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington.

True Roasting Is a Way of Cooking Choice Meat

True roasting is a method of cooking meat similar to broiling, because a high temperature is used in each case to sear the outside and no moisture is added during any of the cooking. Only a cut which is choice, juicy, tender, and contains well-distributed fat, should be roasted. It is desirable to use an uncovered roaster so that there will be no steam formed to soften the crust and wash out the juices, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. The retaining of juices in the roast is at the expense of rich, brown gravy. Some people prefer to sacrifice a little flavor and juiciness in the meat in order to develop more gravy. This is accomplished by pouring a small amount of water in the bottom of the roaster under the rack and covering the roast closely after it is seared. Such a method of cooking is described as "oven braising." Care should be taken that only a small amount of water is added so that the roast is not bathed in liquid.

RAYON IS USEFUL IF PROPERLY HANDLED

Do Not Put Clothespins in Rayon Underwear or You Will Tear It.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

After you have washed rayon underwear, lay it carefully over a line or on a drying rack, but don't use any clothespins, or you may find holes in the fabric, as the illustration shows. Never use very hot water in laundering articles made of rayon; have lukewarm suds made from pure soap. Wetting often weakens the fibers of this fabric, so that great care must be used in washing it. Articles made of it should not be rubbed. They should be gently squeezed and repeatedly rinsed until clean. Do not wear rings while washing rayon fabrics, or you may accidentally tear them. Even rough fingernails may catch in the material and damage it while wet. When the articles you have laundered are dry, have the iron medium hot. Too hot an iron should be avoided.

Rayon is a very useful material if properly handled, says the United States Department of Agriculture. Because of its high luster and the fact that it is often less expensive than silk, it has become very popular for such uses as knitted underwear, draperies, and many other things.

Sunset Cliffs
America's Finest

San Diego's most exclusive and most highly restricted residential district will be officially opened for sale this Saturday afternoon, March 6th, at two o'clock.

For years all San Diego has awaited the day when this most wonderful of all wonderful properties would be placed upon the market.

In all America there is no other spot which has the natural beauty and charm of this district, located on Point Loma with practically a mile of the most beautiful scenic coast line to be found either on the Pacific or the Atlantic. This property offers a distinctiveness and an individuality which cannot be duplicated elsewhere. Restricted to conform to ideas only to be found on the French and Italian Riviera, this property should prove a tremendous asset to the city of San Diego in its future development, and when completed it will be a thing of beauty, which will be talked of by the entire universe.

The larger villa sites are restricted to residences costing not less than twenty-five thousand dollars. Many corner villa sites throughout the tract have a minimum restriction of fifteen thousand dollars; inside villa sites, ten thousand dollars and a few seventy-five hundred dollars, which is the minimum restriction placed upon the residential property of the entire tract. The buildings must all have an exterior finish of light color and all roofs must be of red tile or red gravel.

Included in the purchase price of these villa sites are all the improvements, which include concrete paved streets, curbs, sidewalks, electroliers, sewers, water, gas and electricity, which will be placed upon the property, the putting in of which is already started and will be carried forward continuously until completed. Parkways in the streets will have placed upon them suitable shrubbery and trees. It is our intention to leave nothing undone to make this the most highly improved propery in the city of San Diego.

This property is priced and sold on terms running over a period of four years, if desired, in such a manner as to be within the reach and means of any person seeking a future home in a district of this kind.

Ocean Beach School Notes

Written for "The Beach News" by Harvey Rubin, 6A Grade

The Automobile Club of Southern California has put safety committees throughout San Diego county. They came to Ocean Beach school last week and formed a committee. Ten people were appointed, four of them peing patrolmen and the other six representative citizens.

On Feb. 26 a short program was given in honor of Longfellow's birthday.

The 3B grade is following the motto: "Hear some good music, read a good poem, and see a good picture every day." They study a new picture each morning.

The 5B and 5A classes of the Ocean Beach school are studying lumber. Mr. Scott gave an interesting talk on the subject. Each member of the class is making a book, into which he is putting the information which he has gathered about lumber, as well as pictures. Some of the boys are planning to make a miniature log raft similar to the one in San Diego harbor.

OCEAN BEACH

Written for "The Beach News"
By WINIFRED DAVIDSON

Evading headlong breakers, Ocean Beach
Runs up steep ladders and high stairs of rocks—
Greened now with age and loosened by broad shocks
Of ancient, angry tides. Its gray dunes bleach
Beneath a burning sky; sands overreach
Low thresholds of bright little booths where flocks
A crowd of swimmers whose quick laughter mocks
Shrill cryptic warnings that old seagulls screech

At every garden gate its near waves croon
And through the lingering year its hue remains
Brave scarlet-gold of summer: here is June
Forever under Loma's sea-turned crest!
It is a city winding to the West
With roses trailing down its tilted lanes.

Mission Beach News-Notes

Mission Beach School Notes

Written for "The Beach News" By Pupils Under Direction of Miss Sarellen Morgan

Written by Bettina Greenfield, 6A, and Lois Stephens, 5A

Mission Beach school upper grades have a Civic league. They have several committees, such as the beauty committee, clean-up committee and safety committee. The president is Jesse Barnhill; vice-president, Raymond Durgan; secretary, Bettina Greenfield.

The fourth, fifth and sixth grades are all in one room and are all taught by the same teacher, Miss Morgan. Miss Weller is the principal, and she is very nice. She teaches the first, second and third grades.

Jack Horner just came back March 1, after being quarantined with scarlet fever. Betty Maize came back also, a few days ago, after being quarantined for whooping cough, which her little brother had.

We now have our safety guards, who go about the school grounds keeping the little children out of trouble or danger and keeping all the children from being hurt by warning them. These officers wear badges.

The higher grades are studying James McNeil Whistler's paintings, and find them very interesting.

The 5A's and 5B's wrote compositions on "How Does My Attendance in Public Schools Make Me a Good Citizen?" They will be submitted to a city school contest. We hope to win prizes.

Editor's Note: Our esteemed school children contributors are respectfully requested to write their school notes on one side of the paper only for publications in these columns.
